

GPs told to submit reports on all staff for NHS workforce survey by May...

13 January 2015, Pulse

Exclusive GP practices will have to submit a 'significant piece of work' to managers on all their staff, including a report of their absences, ethnicity and the reasons for staff members leaving, Pulse has learnt.

“ Dr Nigel Watson chief executive of Wessex LMCs told Pulse: 'It is for every member of staff, they're trying to look at the whole of general practice.

'But I think everybody does believe it's a bit intrusive, which is why I believe the BMA has taken legal advice, which said that practices should provide that information.

'If you've got a workforce - and if you take my practice, we've probably got 40 to 45 employees - to fill all that data in on every single person takes some time.'

However, he added that 'decent figures' were needed to plan for increasing the capacity of general practice.
